

Morson International are eager to improve the abilities of the UK's workforce. We have our own dedicated rail training facilities, offering a range of courses to enhance current and future prospects in the rail industry. For information o support, skills and training in the broader market, visit some of the websites listed below.

The 'Learning and Skills Council' aims to enhance the abilities and prospects of adults and young people to make England a more competitive workforce, one which is able to stand out on a global scale. Schemes such as EMA encourage further education, world class facilities enable excellent standards of learning and training, easier access to adult learning increases the skills of the adult workforce and 'on the job' learning develops the talents of current workers

Leading learning and skills

The 'Learning and Skills Council' works across the UK, addressing training for the unemployed, homelessness, the skills gap and qualifications for young people and adults. For more information, visit their website:

<http://www.lsc.gov.uk/>

'Job Centre Plus' is a government run organisation that aims to help as many people as possible back into employment. In addition to advertising vacancies that cover a wide variety of job roles, 'Job Centre Plus' also offers invaluable advice on training, C.V. and Interview tips, what jobs to look for and even one to one advice.

In addition, 'Job Centre Plus' offer help with situations that may cause obstacles to getting back to work including single parenting, relationship difficulties, debt problems, childcare and housing.

For more information visit their website:

<http://www.jobcentreplus.gov.uk>

'NextStep' is a scheme dedicated to training and development (and is part of the Learning and Skills Council initiative). With the intention of improving peoples' employable skills, 'NextStep' offers all people with less than 5 GCSEs or no Level 2 NVQ qualification free one to one advice on training and development. There are regional 'NextStep' branches to cover the whole of England, making it easier to offer training that will improve the prospects of England's workforce.

Training is available across a wide range of media, making it easy to choose the learning method best for you. In addition, C.V. and interview advice is available to make finding that perfect job even easier.

For more information visit their website:

<https://www.nextstep.org.uk>

The 'Disabled Workers Co-operative' website enables disabled people looking for employment to find jobs that may be most suited to your needs. There is a discussion forum, job vacancy board, and the chance to put your C.V. on the online database which employers can then search.

For more information visit their website: <http://www.disabledworkers.org.uk>

For government information and advice on how to find work with a disability, visit the government website:

<http://www.direct.gov.uk/en/DisabledPeople/Employmentsupport>

The 'Women's Engineering Society' is a network of women engineers, scientists and technologists offering support for women looking to break into the engineering industry. This is done through bursaries for higher education, supporting science and technology clubs in high schools, holding events and lectures to inspire more women to enter the engineering profession and supplying information on engineering careers.

Morson are looking to become a corporate sponsor of this organisation. For more information visit their website: www.wes.org.uk